DESCRIPTION:

The three-story gable-roofed rowhouse is located on the southeast corner of North Poppleton and Vine Streets. The two-bay facade was probably rebuilt in the early to mid twentieth century in a stretcher bond with soldier course flat window and door arches and a storefront with flush display windows flanking a center door. Wood infill panels are located above each display window and a transom tops the doorway. The doorway itself is boarded and the display windows are covered by security screens. The upper story windows are boarded. The corbeled brick cornice is almost concealed behind a gutter. The side elevation is stuccoed with a boarded door and two window openings on the first floor, a single window toward the rear on the second floor, and a central window on the third floor. The gable end shows gaps where two interior chimneys have been removed down to the roof level.

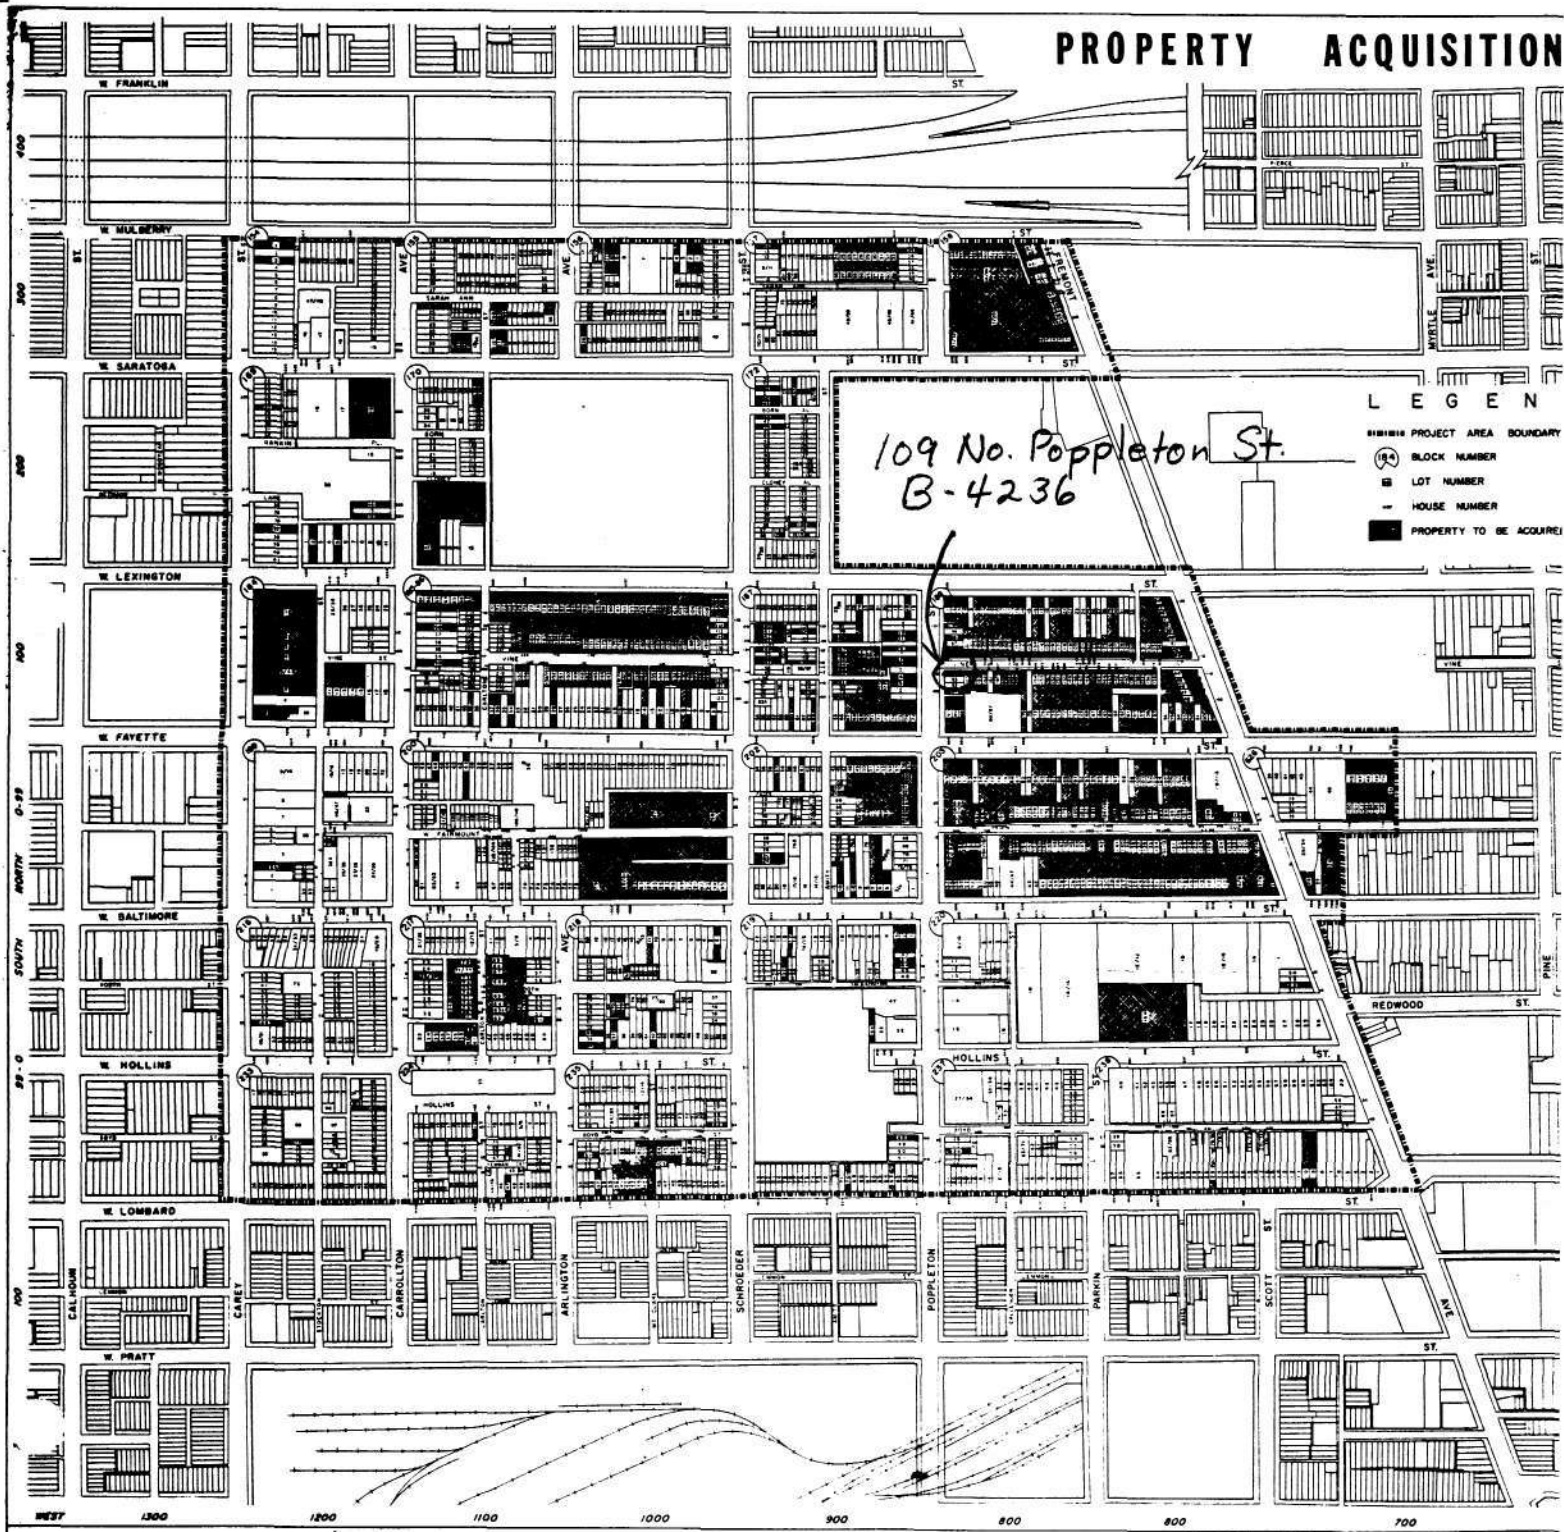

SIGNIFICANCE:

AREA: Architecture LEVEL: Local

Although altered in the twentieth century, this ca. 1830 rowhouse retains the form of an early nineteenth century building. It is a contributing element in an undefined potential historic district.
